A Warning to Picknickers.

The picnic season is at hand, and with it the trials of the housewife who spends a day in preparation for the event, and then hears John say, when the feast has fairly begun under the shady tree, "Mother, is this a railroad sandwich you've given me? The ham is tough and stringy. Let's have another that I can get my teeth through." The remedy is easy—if you begin in time. Have your grocer send you one of "Ferris's Hams of medium size. They're sweet, tender and toothsome."

Racial Readjustment in Georgia

between the races, see that offenders of both races are apprehended and justice impartially administered, and permanently secure protection to both white and black." The movement contemplates the putting of larger responsibility upon the colored race by making Negro policemen for Negro localities and by increasing the number of Negro jurors. In response to the demand that the colored race deliver its criminals leading colored men have asserted that they would if only they were clothed with authority, and this movement contemplates the acceptance of the challenge by trying the experiment. Already through this civic movement a Negro charged with criminal assault was acquitted by a jury of white men in less than five minutes in the face of the positive identification of the prisoner by the white prosecutrix in open court.

The white Civic League is in co-operation with the Colored Co-operative Civic League, each league being represented by an executive committee of twenty. In all matters of interracial welfare these committees will confer and determine what is best to be done. Any man of each race may become a member of his respective league by signifying his intention of supporting the purpose of the league, and already about five thousand members have given their signatures, which are to be printed in the daily press as an ocular demonstration of the real strength of the movement.

Quite as important, if not more so than the movements themselves, is the kind of men behind them. In this the movements are most fortunate, and their promoters are in themselves guarantees of the success of any measures they espouse. Behind the industrial movement is Hon. Clark Howell, editor of the Constitution, popularly called the "Georgia Bible." Former Governor W. J. Northern, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, stands sponsor for the religious movement, and the venerable Southerner asserts that he desires to make this work of the union of the races the crowning work of his long and varied career. Mr. Charles T. Hopkins, a young man at the bar and one of the most potent forces in the life of Atlanta, leads the civic movement, and his name is the synonym of victory in this city. With these distinct yet concurrent movements in operation it is clear that Atlanta is on the eve of real moral reconstruction along race lines, and if successful there is no reason why this plan should not affect the whole South.
